Forum for Science, Technology and Ethics

Call for Applications: Scientific knowledge, Expertise, and Democracy

Advancements in scientific knowledge and technology change the world in which we live. The Forum for Science, Technology and Ethics managed by the Edmond J. Safra Center for Ethics seeks to address questions relating to moral/political issues to which scientific knowledge and expertise give rise.

The center will host a series of monthly meetings in the Faculty of Law lead by scholars and researchers from diverse disciplines.

The forum will meet 12:00-13:00 on the first Tuesday of each month during the first semester and 12:00-13:00 on the last Thursday of each month during the second semester.

We are seeking researchers interested in such questions (broadly construed) to be included in this forum as presenters and/or discussants.

Members of all disciplines and all academic ranks who might wish to participate are invited to contact Dr. Uri Leibowitz at Safracen@post.tau.ac.il. Please include a short CV with your expression of interest. Questions/comments are welcome.

Deadline for Submission: October 10 2016

NB: Discussions will be conducted in English due to participation of researchers and scholars from abroad.
